Plenty Of Books

HEART OF CAMPUS of Crafton Hills College is the Library, opening with 35,000 volumes plus periodicals, pamphlet collection, map file, current newspaper from this country and abroad plus tape recorded music library. Future plans call for addition of two stories, each larger than the one below.

96th Community College

Crafton Hills College is the newest member of the world's largest system of higher education, California's 96 community colleges.

Although functioning with considerable local control, the two year schools operate under the general direction of a state-wide Chancellor and the Board of Governors of the California Community Colleges.

This September the community colleges will enroll nearly 1-million students, roughly 60 percent of all students and eighty percent of all freshmen and sophomores seeking higher education in the State.

The community college has become a California specialty, one that is slowly being copied across the nation. Unique in the California concept is the blending of vocational and academic education on a single campus.

Community colleges transfer students into colleges and universities as juniors, well on their way to their professional degrees in law, medicine, engineering, teaching and the like. But they also graduate the major share of the state's registered nurses, train thousands of technicians, secretaries, mechanics, welders, peace officers and even firemen.

The largest community college in terms of students enrolled is Long Beach City College, 28,000. The smallest is Lassen College in Susanville, with a total day, evening, and part-time enrollment of 1100.

First termed Junior Colleges, the unique schools shifted a few years back to the term "Community College" in recognition of their role in occupational and vocational education as much as anything else.

Historically, community colleges have attempted to answer whatever significant post high school educational needs turn up in the districts that support them. The number of skilled trades taught in them is almost endless. One, Los Angeles Trade Tech, is strictly occupationally oriented.

On the other hand, students transferring from community colleges to four year colleges and universities have through the years almost invariably done as well or better academically as have the so-called "native" students -- those who went to the senior institution straight from high school.

Library To Support Academic Program

Students will find everything needed to speed their academic progress in the spacious library at Crafton Hills College.

Planned eventually to tower three stories in the center of the campus, the library will open with upwards of 35,000 volumes on its shelves.

Purchases for the new college's library have been underway for nearly three years. They have included the basic junior college bibliography developed by the American Library Association, as well as corollary materials in the form of bound periodicals, maps and pamphlets.

According to Librarian Doris Boardman, much of the initial work of gathering materials and readying them for use has been carried on at the Andrews Memorial Library at San Bernardino Valley College. However, other libraries not connected with the College District, have also lent a hand.

"The A. K. Smiley Public Library in Redlands," notes Mrs. Boardman, "has been particularly helpful, serving as a collection point for many donations of books and periodicals."

Through special inter-library loan arrangements, student and faculty will have available to them virtually any work needed for their studies. Other major contributors to the CHC collection include Yucaipa High School, the San Bernardino City Schools Administrative Library and the University of Redlands.

"We will have the complete catalog of Andrews Memorial as well as access to all county, colleges and university collections," said Mrs. Boardman.

Mrs. Boardman and her staff will also maintain a file of leading newspapers including the Yucaipa-Calimesa News-Mirror, the London Times, the New York Times, the Sacramento Bee, the Wall Street Journal and the Christian Science Monitor as well as the various editions of Southern California newspapers.

The library will open at 7:55 a.m. close at 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday. It will open again at 7 p.m. and close at 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday. The library will be closed Saturday, Sunday, and holidays.

In an attempt to extend the resources of the library to people other than students, Mrs. Boardman noted that adult residents of the area may secure limited library privileges at no cost.

Valley College Overcrowded

One of the reasons for the construction of Crafton Hills College is 17 miles down the highway from the school's 520 acre campus.

One of the factors fed into the calculations that produced the new college grew out of the nature and location of the campus of San Bernardino Valley College, Crafton Hill's companion community college, located mid-way between the central business districts of San Bernardino and Colton.

The San Bernardino Valley College campus was first occupied in 1927. At that time it was 23 acres in what had been a bean field. Twenty years later, when booming student enrollment made it necessary to expand the campus, it was ringed by housing on three sides.

The College District had to purchase built-up urban property and in some instances go into condemnation proceedings, in order to expand the SBVC campus to its present 83 acres.

Also, unknown to the original locators of the college, the San Bernardino campus is intersected by the San Jacinto Fault, one of the three major, active earthquake faults that lace the San Bernardino Valley.

The newer buildings on the SBVC campus have been engineered and located with the fault zone in mind. The older structures have been rehabilitated, in some instances virtually re-constructed, to bring them up to modern earthquake safety standards.

However, as early as 1955 the District Board of Trustees had arrived at the decision that a second community college campus should be developed to meet the needs of the growing population of the area. Other considerations went into the decision -- many having to do with quality education -- but the high cost of additional urban real estate plus cost and safety factors of buildings on or near an active fault played their part in the processes that ultimately brought Crafton Hills College into being.

Reading Will Be No Problem

Students with reading problems will get a lot of help at Crafton Hills College. But they will have to demonstrate that they have mastered those problems before they graduate.

Unique among all 96 community colleges in California, Crafton Hills will require that all its graduates have a fair level of competence with the English language before they receive their Associate in Arts Degrees.

According to Counselor James G. Bisi CHC will require no admission testing. Enrollment will be open to all high school graduates and equally open to anyone 18 years of age whether or not they have graduated from high school.

"It is hoped," said Bisi, "that during the course of their first semester students encountering difficulty with English will take advantage of the college's Learning Laboratory."

Patterned on the experience of San Bernardino Valley College's nationally-famed Learning Resources Center, the CHC Learning laboratory will offer students a variety of individually-tailored programs designed to improve their reading rates and comprehension whether or not they are reading at a college level.

Said Bisi, "Anyone of us will be able to benefit from the expert help available in the Laboratory."

The Learning Lab will operate on a "Diagnostic/Prescriptive" basis. Reading problems at whatever level they show up, are first diagnosed through a battery of simple tests, occasionally with the use of eye-movement cameras. Once the reader's hang-up is discovered and analyzed, a reading and study specialist prescribes a series of exercises, drills and studies, some employing machines that control the rate at which lines of type appear -- for the individual student. Once the program is set up for the student, he can work at his own pace.

The lab will be open for individualized as well as group instruction during the hours of college operation.

"We probably will set three testing days," Bisi said, "along toward the end of each semester. Our present thinking is that our graduates should attain a respectable score on the Nelson-Denny reading test, but as President Davidoff told the Trustees, 'we are not married to any set of numbers!'"

"It's a new program and a new concept and within limits," Bisi noted, "we will be somewhat flexible. And certainly we will be learning and changing as we come into full operation. But the basic idea we will retain: our graduates will be competent and comfortable with the language.

They've Only Just Begun

Planned for expansion in five year stages, Crafton Hills College will grow steadily instead. San Bernardino Community College District Superintendent Raymond F. Ellerman recently revealed a slight modification in future building plans for the new community college.

Projected for an ultimate enrollment of 5,000 full-time students the two-year school was designed to be built in three "increments", five years apart. "It seems to make more sense to build as the student body grows, to build each year, to add what's needed," Ellerman said. With the new college holding its first Open House, and before its first students are completely registered, Ellerman's office is already involved with additions to the campus. Construction of the first such addition will probably begin next year. "We will first add a physical education facility, something we couldn't include in the first Increment", Ellerman declared. "In fact we are well into the planning for it." "Next," Ellerman added, "Our present thinking is to build a multipurpose auditorium and lecture facility, something which could accommodate community forums and large lecture presentations." After the Auditorium, Ellerman feels "We'd better take a look at the availability of more classrooms." The master plan for the campus and even grading and site development have been worked out on a total campus basis. Thus it is possible to add buildings or groups of buildings with a minimum disturbance of the ongoing educational program.

Foundation Opens Doors For Grants, Gifts To Crafton Hills College

A foundation is already operating to receive and administer gifts and donations to Crafton Hills College. Headed up by Redlands civil engineer Harold Hartwick, the Crafton Hills College Foundation was formed in early June. Before the month was over, the non-profit corporation was solidly in the black. Water stock, library materials and cash were among its assets in its first few weeks of operation. A major donation of $10,000 was gratefully received from The Independent Insurance Agents of San Bernardino, presented by its representative insurance executive Donald F. Moreland of Redlands. A total of 18 different insurance firms throughout the Inland Empire joined in funding the donation. Other founding members of the Foundation include Superior Court Judge Margaret J. Morris of San Bernardino, Harold C. Harris Jr., San Bernardino, Ruben Finkelstein, Beverly Hills, and one of the donors of the campus site, Donald W. Hunt, Yucaipa contractor and Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the San Bernardino

Community College District; Redlands attorney and District trustee Edward F. Taylor; Yucaipa rancher N. A. McAnally, CHC President Foster Davidoff and SBCCD Controller Winston W. Carl.

In receiving the gift from the insurance agents, earmarked for loans to students, Davidoff informed the insurance men that very often a small loan for books makes the difference between a deserving student getting an education and dropping out of school.

Recreation Specialists A Booming New Career

Longer life span and increased leisure time for Americans have produced a rapidly expanding new career field for young and old alike. Recreation specialists are now in demand in both public and private employment, year round and from coast to coast, according to Tom Scott, instructor in Recreation technology at Crafton Hills College. Scott will direct a four phase program for training recreation workers at the new Community College. The options open to students at the school will include completion of two years of study leading to transfer with junior standing to a four year college or university training Recreation professionals or graduation from Crafton Hills College with an Associate in Arts degree with a recreation technology major. The college will also offer two one-year certificate programs. One program is of a generalized nature and leads to employment in city and regional programs, campus, churches and the like. The second certificate program is designed around recreation therapy and leads to employment in nursing homes, convalescent hospitals and other health facilities. Scott plans to offer internships in various existing recreation programs in the area as part of the career training. Of the 32 area agencies operating recreation programs, 26 have indicated that they will help Crafton Hills College train and place its graduates.

Dean Of Students

ASSISTANT TO THE PRESIDENT Don A. Yowell also serves as Dean of Students at Crafton Hills College. Yowell has already met with prospective student leaders looking to the organization of the first Associated Students Council at the community college.

Classes Day And Night

Crafton Hills College will be an 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. operation. Day classes will be complemented by a schedule of evening offerings.

The evening classes will be set both on campus and in the surrounding communities, according to Tirso G. Serrano, Dean of Evening, Summer and Vocational Education at the new community college.

Serrano and his faculty colleagues have projected a program that carries transfer courses as well as vocational and occupational training, and general education.

The Evening schedule will include studies in Art (painting), Auto Body repair, Biology, Chemistry, Education, Composition Literature, Creative Writing, French, Spanish, Geography, History, Minorities, Mathematics (algebra), Music (stage band), Philosophy, General Psychology, Child and Adolescent Psychology, Developmental Reading, Recreation careers, Typing, Shorthand, Sociology, Public Speaking and Theater Workshop.

As are all the classes at the college, evening classes will be open to any resident of the college district, 18 years of age or older whether or not they have graduated from high school. Some individual courses do require that the student have completed a pre-requisite course, but most of the initial evening courses are pegged at the beginning college level.

A five dollar per course fee will be charged for each evening class in line with a new policy developed by the District's Board of Trustees. For some laboratory courses, a small lab fee is charged. Students provide their own books, purchasable at the campus bookstore; if unavailable through regular retail outlets.

Serrano is hopeful that, in addition to the classes set in Redlands and Mentone, the college will be able to take its classes into the community in other locations and forms.

"We look forward to organizing a number of specialized seminars, as well as experimenting with other formats that may be of great value to the people of the area," said the dean.

Serrano, who worked his way through college as an electrician had one additional point he wished to make: "At Crafton Hills College our commitment to vocational education is every bit as great as our commitment to the standard transfer courses we offer. It's a total commitment."

Firms Complete College Campus Project On Time

From brush covered hills to a sparkling new community college campus in 35 months; finished, lighted, landscaped, equipped and ready for its first students.

Fifty-one firms and upwards of 2000 people have labored to create Crafton Hills College midway between Yucaipa and Redlands.

Riding herd on the six general contractors and 46 subs during the completion of the $8 million project have been two staff members of the San Bernardino Community College District, William L. Grigsby and E. R. "Fitz" Fitzpatrick.

Grigsby is Assistant Superintendent of the College District; Fitzpatrick served as the District's on-the-job inspector. For Grigsby it was the second college he had help build and for Fitz it was the final big construction job before his retirement.

Both men along with the major contractors take considerable pride in the fact that "... we brought her in on time."

Grigsby, instrumental in the completion of Chaffey College's Alta Loma campus, is particularly enthusiastic about the firm that got the bid to construct the three main building complexes, Steed Brothers Construction Company of Alhambra.

"From the time that Steed's people first came on the Site," said Grigsby, "right through the final punch list, they have been great to work with. Excellent!"

Grigsby singled out Dick Houston, Steed's superintendent on the job, and Frank Trefethan of the firm's home office for particular praise.

"This was a complicated project, to say the least," Grigsby observed, "but they saw to it that there just weren't any problems. I don't know how you can say enough good things about the way they and Fitz brought it off."

The buildings are steel-reinforced concrete with a color mixed into the cement. They will never require painting or other exterior maintenance. Six underground systems tie the campus together, water, sewer, power, air-conditioning, fire alarm and communications, the latter including provisions for full use of television as an instructional tool.

The water for the 523 acre campus is secured from the City of Redlands through a 3.3 mile pipeline. It is pumped to a 1 million gallon tank that sits atop the ridge line overlooking the college, and visible from as far away as San Bernardino.

Student Government-Already Set

Saturday's (AUG. 26) Open House at Crafton Hills College will find the beginnings of student government already in action.

As early as a month ago an organizational meeting of prospective student leaders convened on the campus to work and talk their way through a six-item agenda.

Called by Don A. Yowell, Assistant to President Foster Davidoff, and serving as the dean of students, the gathering examined initial student activities, the selection process for student leaders and council members, and the recruitment of members.

Students participating in the organizational meeting were Bill Craw, Mike Houston, Clyde Brett and Phil Hahn of Redlands, Cindy Dixon and Stephen Miller of Yucaipa.

Once formed, the Student Council will include a president, vice president, a recording secretary and three commissioners. The commissioners will serve in Finance, Academic and Cultural events, Athletic and Social events. Some of the early concern of the students at the new college will have to do with student participation in the governance of the college. Provision has been made for students to participate in the proceedings of the Faculty Council, the principal decision-making body on the campus.

Other matters that may come before the Council of the Associated Students include the selection of school colors, a mascot, the Alma Mater.

An Early Start

Golf And Skiing On Campus

Physical education at Crafton Hills College will be geared to the activities people are most likely to continue after graduation.

Initially the school will offer archery, bowling, golf and skiing.

Physical education is no longer required of community college students throughout California, thus Crafton Hills College can design its program for "carry-over" value rather than simply to provide a state mandated 120 minutes of activity a week.

The school will open with no change facilities, showers, locker-rooms and the like.

However plans are underway to begin construction of a physical education plant within the next twelve months. The site is prepared; utilities are in.

Archery, golf and skiing will be taught on the campus. Bowling will be scheduled on rented lanes in Redlands. An artificial ski slope will be installed this Fall on a slope to the east of the Laboratory Complex. The Campus already contains a 9-hole golf course developed in a green belt fire break separating the present parking lots and buildings from the heavy brush covered slopes of the hills to the North.

Bill Hoyt, former head track coach at San Bernardino Valley College and a long time Redlands resident, together with Olen Baggett, former head of the SBVC community recreation program and, along with Hoyt an assistant football coach, make up the P.E. faculty at the new college.

SPORTS

Sports Roundup

During the past year the Sports Page has brought you previews and results of the few sports related activities. We have told you how to master the skills of volleyball and how to come out ahead in the bike boom. We have told you about the Volleyball and Ping Pong tournaments and Gordon Maxwell has spread his sport-minded philosophy far and wide.

With the entire staff: Glen Campbell, Dana Robie, Gordon Maxwell, and Craig Kundig returning next year and the new gym ready for use, we hope to present a more useful sports page to you, our fellow students.

Overall, we felt that we presented stories that would be interesting to you. Perhaps next fall will see the first intramural program established here at Crafton. If so, the sports page will finally have some exciting events to cover. We all have our fingers crossed! Let's hope that the welcome sounds of shouting athletes and blowing whistles will enliven this campus in the fall of 1974.

RICK KRAHN lets fly what would have been his fifth strike in a row. Unfortunately, the ball missed the pocket by inches.

TWO EAGER ROADRUNNERS engage in some fast and lively ping pong action.

AT FULL THROTTLE - Alan Spears, CHC business law instructor and professional cycle racer flashes by for one more lap.

ROADRUNNERS ON SKIS

"WHAT COMES DOWN MUST GO UP"-- Skiing reverses the ancient adage of "what goes up must come down." These skiers struggle back up the slope to try another run under the watchful eye of Bill Hoyt, CHC's premier ski instructor. His clear voice can be heard campus-wide as he exhorts his students to do their best. At upper left, Pat Beaver shows advanced technique as he negotiates CHC's unique torture hill. (Staff photos)

PRODIGY UPSETS SPASSKY

Twenty-three year old Anatoly Karpov, known as "the Russian Bobby Fischer" defeated Boris Spassky in 11 games to advance in the World Chess Playoffs. The winner will face American Bobby Fischer for the World Championship in 1975.

SPRING FLING

It's been estimated that as many as 300 people attended both sessions of the Spring Fling. There were about 50 children up here in the late afternoon.

"... Mail's moving faster. For a lot of reasons. But I'd say the reason behind it all is Zip Code. ..."

Sherry Gladney, Postal Worker, Chicago, Ill.

How to mail a letter today when you want it delivered tomorrow.

Out of town.

Be sure to use Air Mail. And remember to include a Zip Code in the address.

Mail before 4:00 p.m. from any specially marked Air Mail box. Or by 5:00 p.m. at your Main Post Office.

You'll get next-day delivery to major cities within 600 miles almost all the time. And, second-day delivery anywhere in the country.

In your town.

Again, be sure to include a Zip Code in the address. Mail by the last pickup before 5:00 p.m. That's it.

You'll get next-day delivery in your town and the area around it, most every time you mail.

These Zip Code tips can help you.

If you don't know a Zip Code, just look in the handy Zip Code Section of your phone book. Or call your local Post Office.

Always put your Zip Code in your return address. So people can copy it down.

People really depend on the mail, and the mail depends on Zip Code. Un-Zipped letters can slow down all the mail. So put a Zip Code on everything you mail.

Help us help you.
Use Zip Code.
