Native American Rhetoric

Presented by Larry Gross
San Manuel Band of Mission Indians
Endowed Chair of Native American Studies
University of Redlands

Native American rhetoric is different from the way speech making is taught in mainstream schools. Native American rhetoric includes the use of digressions, repetition, and storytelling, all of which are discouraged in the teaching of rhetoric. However, the rhetorical approach used by Native Americans can result in some very powerful oratorical events. Find out more about the conventions of Native American rhetoric, the reasons they are used, and, most importantly, how to listen to it from a Native American scholar who was the first person to publish an analysis of the Native American approach to giving speeches.

EQUITY CERTIFICATE SERIES

Looking for an increasing professional development opportunity to incorporate into your 2017 goals? Look no further! This equity certificate series offers an opportunity to learn more about the students you work with every day, helping you to become a better instructor, advisor, and colleague. Everyone is welcome to all sessions. However to save the certificate, you must attend at least 3 of the 7 sessions.

SCHEDULE

Race and Ethnicity - January 26 1:00pm California
In the past three decades, college campuses have become increasingly diverse. Caucasian students are no longer the majority ethnicity on many campuses, including Craftern Hills. However, despite increasing diversity, an achievement gap has persisted. In this session, we will learn more about where this achievement gap occurs, and discuss potential solutions for addressing academic disparities among ethnic groups.

Ability and Disability - February 9 1:00pm California
Research shows that students with disabilities are just as capable of achieving academic success as their able-bodied peers, but they often need more time, resources, and funding. This is complicated by the fact that students with disabilities often face an additional challenge of economic disadvantage. In this session, we will learn how to leverage all efforts on campus to better serve this population.

Socioeconomic Status - February 23 1:00pm California
Higher education trends of the 21st century have not been kind to students who come from economically disadvantaged situations. Tuition is increasing, and many no longer have the full range of college experience, and the majority of financial aid has become merit based rather than need based. In this session, you will learn about the critical role that Craftern Hills plays in providing an affordable education, the impact of financial aid on low income students, and the relationship between socioeconomic status and academic achievement. Additionally, we will discuss how college employees, administrators, and faculty members can close the "social capital" gap for economically disadvantaged students.

LGBT Students - March 9 1:00pm California
A 2015 report on the "State of Higher Education for LGBT People" by Campus Pride revealed that nearly a quarter of students who identify as LGBT face campus harassment, nearly one third reported hearing for their physical safety on campus. In this session, we will discuss what administrators and faculty can do to promote a not just a safe campus, but a welcoming and inclusive campus culture for all LGBT students.

Non-Traditional Students - March 23 1:00pm California
Non-traditional students are one of the fastest growing college populations, but due to competing obligations and a lack of flexibility among college institutions, this population experiences a high failure rate. Non-traditional students graduate at a rate that is 27% lower than their peers who are in a traditional age group. In this session, we will discuss what colleges can do at an institutional level to help these students reach their academic goals, and how administrators and faculty can contribute to the effort inside and outside of the classroom.

Veteran Students - April 6 1:00pm California
Veteran students have reported feeling isolated on college campuses, as though they "don't belong" and don't relate with their college community. In addition to being non-traditional students, they also frequently experience a challenging transition to civilian life. This session will address how institutions, administrators, and faculty meet this transition and assist veterans with integrating into their campus culture and community.

Foster Youth - April 20 1:00pm California
By the time a foster youth enters college, they have already overcome a tremendous amount of adversity and challenge. Unfortunately, the challenges continue throughout their postsecondary journey. According to the University of Chicago, only 16% will earn a two or four-year degree by age 24. In this session, we will discuss the challenges foster youth face both prior to and during college, as well as the critical role administrators and faculty play in providing support to help this population reach academically and graduate successfully.
