NEW COURSES

- o. ETHS 106 Introduction to Women' Studies *(to see course outline go to SEARCH, COURSES in CurricUNET)
Originator Julie McKee
Rationale: An introductory women's studies course contributes significantly to the ability to comprehend the contributions of women to the rich patchwork of American society and better understand women's lives, roles, and challenges especially in the lives of Native American, African American, Asian American and Latina women. Also offered as SOC 106. This course is a critical part of a comprehensive ethnic studies and women's studies program at the community college level. It also will provide students an introduction to women's studies with an emphasis on women's history, critical race theory and gender theory in order to increase students' appreciation and understanding of diversity. This course is associate degree applicable and transfers to CSU.
Departmental Recommendation: SOC 100 or 100H and eligibility for ENGL 101
